

HEPATITIS C

a resource guide

provided by the

Massachusetts Viral Hepatitis Coalition

in partnership with

AIDS Action Committee of MA

APRIL 2013

Introduction

AIDS Action Committee of MA (AAC) and the Massachusetts Viral Hepatitis Coalition (MVHC) created this guide for people interested in learning more about hepatitis C (Hep C, HCV) including where to go for screening, care, and treatment in Massachusetts. The guide is also for those who provide information and referrals to Hep C services. The information provided here represents services available at the time the guide was developed (Summer 2012). It's a good idea to call ahead to make sure the services are still offered at the location you're interested in.

If you have further questions, need more information than is in this guide, or just need someone to talk to about Hep C, call the MA Viral Hepatitis Hotline 1 (888) 443-HEPC (4372).

How this guide is organized

The agencies in this guide are organized by the kinds of services they provide. The Table of Contents lists service headings to help you locate the services you need. Use the information listed for each entry as a starting point. Each entry has the following information, as available:

- Agency name, address, and telephone number
- TDD/TTY numbers for hearing-impaired individuals
- Internet address
- Brief description of the services offered
- Hours of operation and cost, are listed where relevant, but call each agency for details and updates

I think I might have been exposed to Hep C! Where do I get tested?

The best resource for getting tested is your primary care doctor, if you have one. Your doctor is a great resource because they already know you and your history. They can help you decide if testing is needed, and can be there with resources when you find out your result. They can either help you make sure a negative result stays negative, or connect you to care if you test positive. HCV testing is covered by most health insurance plans in Massachusetts.

If you don't have a primary care doctor, you will find below a list of free/low cost testing sites and sites that offer standard and rapid HCV testing in MA.

If none of these work for you, or you need more resources call the MA Viral Hepatitis Hotline
1 (888) 443-HEPC (4372).

I’ve tested positive. Now what?

What happens next can differ depending on your needs. If you would like more information about hepatitis C, you can find it here: www.aac.org/get-info/hepatitis-the-basics. If you would like to talk to someone about testing positive for HCV, what to do next, or to help find more resources, call the MA Viral Hepatitis Hotline 1 (888) 443-HEPC (4372).

Find a doctor

The first step, for many people, after being diagnosed with hepatitis C, is to get connected to medical care. Once you find a doctor who specializes in Hepatitis, they can help monitor your liver, and help decide if, and when, you should go on treatment.

We have included a list of places where you can get medical care from a liver specialist. This list includes both medical facilities and doctors. Because doctors can change practices and locations, it might be most helpful to start with a location, instead of starting with a specific doctor.

New treatments for HCV can be VERY effective, but it depends on a number of individual factors. Start talking to your doctor about your options early.

For more information about what treatment might look like, what factors make treatment a better option for some people rather than others, and resources to track new treatment options that might be available in the future, check out these links below.

Case management

For some people it is really helpful to work with a case manager to make sure you are getting all of your needs met. A case manager can connect you to a number of different resources, such as medical care, or help you identify other resources that could be helpful for you. There are a few HCV specific medical case management programs in Massachusetts. They are:

Healthy Living with HCV

HCV is a very slow moving virus. For people with chronic HCV it is important to learn ways to maximize health, to help keep the virus in check. The HCV Advocate website has a whole section devoted to Living with Hepatitis C that can be found here: http://hcvadvocate.org/hepatitis/living_w_hepatitis_C.asp#1

Specific guides that are good places to start include this newly diagnosed guide, which features information about getting the most out of medical appointments.

http://www.hcvadvocate.org/hepatitis/factsheets_pdf/Newly%20Diagnosed.pdf

Also helpful is this guide to applying for disability based on HCV.

http://www.hcvadvocate.org/hepatitis/factsheets_pdf/Disability_Guide.pdf

How do I pay for all of this?

Managing a diagnosis of HCV can get costly, with the added medical visits, and if you go on treatment. If you don't currently have health insurance, a great first step is to get some! The MA Health Connector website, <https://www.mahealthconnector.org>, can help you find the health insurance coverage that is best for you.

Find out if you are eligible MassHealth here: <http://www.mass.gov/eohhs/consumer/insurance/masshealth-apply/>

I can't afford treatment

If you can't afford treatment, there are programs to help pay for some of the costs. Some helpful resources are:

Housing

There are no housing resources specifically for people living with hepatitis C in Massachusetts. <http://www.masslegalhelp.org/housing> provides excellent resources for finding affordable housing in Massachusetts.

Substance Abuse

Eliminating or reducing substance use is helpful for staying HCV negative and for boosting the health of a person who is HCV positive.

Needle Exchange- If you feel you are unable to reduce or eliminate your substance use, using a clean needle every time you inject is a great first step in reducing the risk of HCV transmission. Pharmacies in Massachusetts sell clean syringes without a prescription or ID. Additionally, there are several needle exchange programs across the state:
